

Your horse's health and well-being are of the utmost importance and the National Western Stock Show is committed to animal health and safety. We employ several preventative measures as part of our biosecurity plan and encourage horse owners to participate in minimizing the risks to protect the health and welfare of the equine industry.

For the safety of you and your animals...

- DO NOT use common water or feed buckets
- Park trailers and vehicles away from barn areas
- DO NOT have dogs at events
- Wash your hands before AND after touching animals
- DO NOT leave hoses on the ground
- Use hand sanitizer often
- DO NOT let hoses touch or drop into water buckets
- Use receptacles to properly dispose of needles and other medical devices

More info: <http://www.equinediseasecc.org/>